

... greatest possible effort in war production. In England, where wages are determined by collective bargaining alone and labor participates in price control and rationing agencies, from December 1940 to January 1942, wages rose 18 per cent while living cost